

SAMENSCHOOL
Is searching for Artists in R e s i d e n c e !
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
!!!!!!!!!!!!

In return:
A room, a studio,
and a network of
co-conspirators.
The rest is up to us.

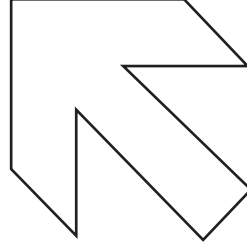

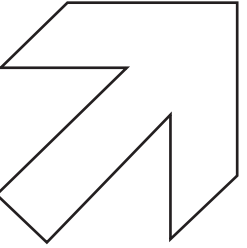

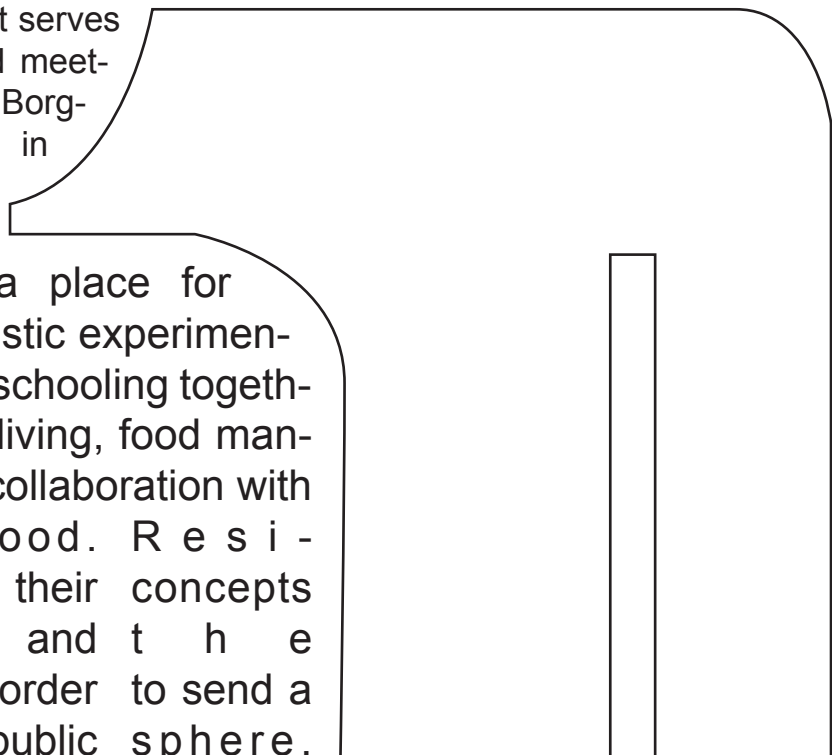

Samenschool

[gathering place /
together-school] is a house run by artists, located on a square that serves as a passage and meeting place in the Borg-erhout district in Antwerp.

P r o f i l e :
Your individual practice has a collective aspect and a queer attitude to learn and organize things. Do you want to think up and implement events together with the resident artists and the neighbourhood?
Would you like to make more In-Situ
work? Do you have a new format that we have not considered?

Samenschool is a place for social, economic and artistic experimentation. Non-hierarchically schooling together, together learning and living, food managing - whether or not in collaboration with the neighbourhood. R e s i - d e n t s can release their concepts at the Samenschool and the neighbourhood in order to send a collective energy in the public sphere.
School- ing together can take such close forms that it is no longer clear who is the maker and who is public. This is exactly the intention.

OPEN CALL	Inside Samenschool you'll find a communal kitchen, a risograph print workshop, studios, an event space, shared living areas, and a garden that is slowly reclaiming itself.	Every Tuesday we open the house for Open Atelier.	We believe maintenance is creative.	We are interested in queer ecologies.	Living here means contributing financially to the shared costs.	We are looking for people who don't ask:	If this text feels less like an advertisement than like a recognition... come by.
Come build Samenschool with us.		Doors open.
This is not a search for tenants.		People arrive.	Cooking is political.	Feminist infrastructures.	But money alone has never sustained Samenschool.	"What do I get here?"	Join us on a Tuesday.
This is a call for co-conspirators.		Projects emerge.	Administration is invisible art.	DIY knowledge.			Print something.
For gardeners, cooks, artists, repairers, printers, neighbours, hackers, readers, organisers, dreamers, listeners, hosts, builders, compost enthusiasts, troublemakers, researchers, caregivers, and people who refuse to separate living from creating.	These are not facilities.	Someone is printing.	Repair is resistance.	Mutual aid.	People do.		Cook with us.
	They are commons.	Someone is fixing a bike.		Open-source culture.	Time does.		Plant something.
	Each space exists because people continue to care for it.	Someone is reading.	Hosting is infrastructure.	Print as resistance.	Energy does.	but who become curious about another question:	Organise something.
Samenschool is not a product. It is not a cultural venue. It is not simply a shared house.	The kitchen needs cooks.	Someone is planting tomatoes.	Gardening is world-building.	Collective learning.	Ideas do.		Read.
It is an unfinished ecosystem.	The garden needs hands.	Someone is making soup.	Rest is necessary	Making with our hands.	Presence does.		Listen.
A place where domestic life, artistic practice, collective infrastructure, and everyday politics become inseparable.	The library needs readers.	Someone is organising an exhibition that didn't exist yesterday.	Care is not an after-thought.	Thinking with others.	We don't believe rent alone creates community.		Stay.
A place that asks:	The risograph needs printers.	The Tuesday evening is less an event than a recurring invitation:	It is the technology that keeps everything alive.	Failing together.	Community is something we continuously compose together.	"What can we build that none of us could build alone?"	Or simply begin a conversation.
How do we live differently?	The events need initiators.	Come work.					Samenschool is always unfinished.
Not alone.	The house needs maintenance.	Come meet.
Not competitively.	The community needs attention.	Come imagine.					Maybe that's exactly where you come in.
Not as consumers of space.	Nothing runs automatically.	Come make something together.
But as people who actively produce the conditions in which we can all exist.	Everything is collective infrastructure.
